Research interests

My research focuses on the field of pre-modern and modern Arabic Islamic language and literature, with particular emphasis on the analysis of literary and cultural phenomena in the Mamluk period in Egypt. In my research themes I examine the social cultural and political changes occurred in the Mamluk period and their connection with the literary production, especially with the origin of new literary genres and the evolution of the traditional ones. In addition to my research activities, I regularly translate literary and academic works from the Italian contemporary panorama from Italian into Arabic. I am also interested in modern Arabic and Egyptian narrative.
